NO GOD, NO MASTER

Lincoln). The suspected group is the poor but proud immigrants and down-trodden laborers, although the search finds little to nothing in this direction.

Writer-director Terry Green packs his tale of exploding bombs, striking workers, anarchist cells and overreacting U.S. authorities with crisscrossing historical figures — Emma Goldman; The Palmer Raids, named for Attorney Gen. Mitchell Palmer (Ray Wise), whose specialty was mass arrests and deportation; union-busting John D. Rockefeller; crackdown specialist J. Edgar Hoover; Industrial Workers of the World leader Carlo Tresca; and Summer 1919, a series of package bombs start showing up on the doorsteps of prominent politicians and businessmen. The U.S. Bureau of Investigation (precursor to J. Edgar Hoover's FBI) "uncovers" an anarchist plot .

The agent assigned to spearhead the investigation is William Flynn, masterfully played by Oscar-nominated David Strathairn (Good Night and Good Luck, anarchists Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti.

Based on true events, No God, No Master draws a line from the civil unrest of 1920s anti-immigrant America to today's terror-besotted society.
